The True Facts About Our BUTTER

1 _ All of this butter was made under the strict supervision of the city, parish and state health departments. It meets all the requirements of the tests in effect at the time it was made.

- 2 The mold test is new! This is the first test that has ever been made on our butter for mold content by the state department of public health.
- 3_ All butter, made from sour cream, contains mold. The "mold mycelia" test, set as standard by the department of agriculture, is a test that is very delicate and can only be made by highly technical microscopic examinations. A count of "60" is considered good butter. The count runs from 1 to 100.
- 4 The butter in controversy was churned in the latter part of the summer of 1942, and is in 65-pound blocks in our own cold storage vault which maintains a temperature of zero or below. Foreseeing a great shortage of butter fat in the latter part of the year, we wanted to have this butter for sale during the Christmas holidays when there is a big demand.

Samples of this butter, for the test in controversy, were taken by the state board of health on October 13, 1942, and our first report and knowledge of this butter was given us on December 8, 1942. Not one pound of this butter has been taken out or offered for sale, and we do not intend to offer it for sale until tests show to everybody's satisfaction that it meets all requirements of the pure food laws.

5. We are co-operating 100 per cent with the city, parish and state health officials, and we are NOW making mold tests on all sour cream received at our plant since the state board of health is requiring this new test.

In the first, an American Catalina reconnaissance plane observed five destroyers 16 miles northeast of the Russell islands which are about 60 miles northwest of the American airfield on Guadalcanal. The plane scored one direct hit and two near hits on one destroyer which was left burning.

They were intercepted by 12 enemy zeros. In the ensuing air fight, eight of the zeros and five of the American fighters were shot down. The dive bombers seriously damaged two destroyers. Children Should Earn Their Spending Money

"A penny earned is a penny appreciated," says Clare Tree Major, para-prasing an old adage to emphasize the advantages of children working for their spending money.

Using as an example the play "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" which is coming here January 28, the noted director of the Children's Theatre of New York points to the immense satisfaction the young Rebecca and her friends get from their moneymaking enterprises, and that satisfaction is in no way limited to story. book people.

"In Monroe as in Riverboro, Maine, where the play is set," says Clare Tree Major, "children take much more cleasure in spending nickles and dimes they've been inventive or engetic enough to earn, than those doled out to them as 'allowance.' Furthermore, she finds that youngsters are also more careful of the pennies they make, since in earning them they learn the value of money.'

Chare Tree Major knows whereof the speaks when she discusses children in her eighteen years as producer of the Children's Theater, her an companies there played to young andiences that pass the million mark

Just now, day after day, in every state, these young audiences take special delight in watching Rebecca turn a venture in soap into big business. Mes. Children Should Earn Their Spending Money

"A penny earned is a penny appre-ciated," says Clare Tree Major, paraprasing an old adage to emphasize the advantages of children working for their spending money.

Using as an example the play "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" which is coming here January 28, the noted director of the Children's Theatre of New York points to the immense satisfaction the young Rebecca and her friends get from their moneymaking enterprises, and that satisfaction is in no way limited to storybook people.

"In Monroe as in Riverboro, Maine, where the play is set," says Clare Tree Major, "children take much more pleasure in spending nickles and limes they've been inventive or engetic enough to earn, than those doled out to them as 'allowance.' Furthermore, she finds that youngsters are also more careful of the pennies they make, since in earning them they learn the value of money. Clare Tree Major knows whereof

Point rationing is on the way, bringing with it a major problem to every housewife in America! The problem is this: How shall I keep the family well fed and healthy on limited food rations?

Here's a solution to your problem: Suppose you want to have a roast for dinner tomorrow. In preparing it, you will want to reduce shrinkage as much as possible and save nutritious values by low temperature oven roasting. Cook beef roast 27-30 minutes per pound at 300° F.; fresh pork 35-40 minutes per pound at 350° F.; veal 25 minutes per pound at 300° F.; lamb 35-45 minutes per pound at 300° F.

Test this principle for yourself-try the recipe given below—you will be delighted with the results!

Stop in at the office and let us give you free Home Volunteer booklets on wartime cooking, meal-planning and conservation. They will help you to "get along" with Point Rationing. There is no obligation.

It so happens that as this new day breaks, we here at the House of Haas turn the hour-glass through which we've measured our many years of time in service here.

We are merchants, yes. But first of all we are your fellow Americans. Our service now is first to help find and build the way beyond the crossroads, to man's harmony and happiness. We do resolve, with you, that we shall all work for that future. We shall be the good bondamen, while the brave make battle. We shall look up and reach, together, for those fine and enduring things that give man lasting strength in the hour of war, and a heart ready for lasting peace.

We offer for your selection a distinguished family of America's finest men's apparel.

NOTICE HOUSEWIVES OF NORTHEAST LOUISIANA

EFFECTIVE 12:01 A. M.--JANUARY 18, 1943

In compliance with an order by the United States Director of Food Distribution these Monroe Bakeries, along with every other bakery in the nation, will discontinue their long-established practice of slicing your bread. No bread will be sliced at all—for home consumption or other uses. We fully realize that this action will cause much inconvenience to the housewives of the nation, but it was decreed in an effort to try to keep the price of bread down to its present levels.

If such action will keep down the price and help us win the war, the bakers of the nation are more than glad to comply. Rest assured, however, that the slicing service will be resumed as quickly as possible when victory is won.

The same Government order requires that all white bread shall be enriched with health-giving vitamins to keep our people strong and well. For a long time the bread produced by these bakeries has been fully enriched and consequently is one of your most delicious and nourishing foods.

No matter what the future may bring, your Government appreciates the importance of bread in our daily lives and there will always be plenty of it for everyone.
